

The fact that a witness has previously been convicted of a felony, or a crime involving dishonesty or false statement, is also a factor you may consider in weighing the credibility of that witness. The fact of such a conviction does not necessarily destroy the witness' credibility, but is one of the circumstances you may take into account in determining the weight to be given to the witness' testimony.

As stated before, a defendant has a right not to testify. If a defendant does testify, however, the defendant's testimony should be weighed and considered, and the defendant's credibility determined, in the same way as that of any other witness.
